

Distribution Box Bridge Accessories Manufacturer

Article Overview

Leading manufacturers of distribution box bridge accessories include Heinrich Kopp GmbH, Hager, Weidmüller, and OBO, offering busbars, wiring bridges, terminals, and modular components for residential, commercial, and industrial applications.

Key Manufacturers and Offerings

Heinrich Kopp GmbH provides a wide range of accessories for DIN rail components, including busbars, wiring bridges in various lengths, and protective ground and neutral conductor terminals. Their products are designed for secure screw connections and forced-joint fittings, ensuring reliable installation in distribution boxes (Heinrich Kopp GmbH) . Hager offers distribution boards and enclosures suitable for residential and small commercial projects. Their accessory range includes terminals, busbars, and wiring bridges compatible with modular systems like quadro4, quadro5, and orion+ series, allowing flexible assembly of electrical panels (Hager) . Weidmüller specializes in modular and decentralized distribution boxes with high-quality materials and robust designs. Their FieldPower® system combines busbar trunking and standard cables for flexible power, signal, and data distribution. Accessories include pluggable insulation displacement connections and “PUSH IN” contacts for cables from 0.5 to 10 mm², suitable for industrial and automation applications (Weidmüller) . OBO provides a variety of distribution box accessories for industrial installations, including connectors, terminals, and routing systems. Their products support reliable electrical connections and are compatible with multiple enclosure types, ensuring safe and efficient power distribution (OBO)
