

Israel builds bridges

Article Overview

Israel has constructed bridges for both military operations and infrastructure development, including tank bridges in Gaza and strategic road connections in the West Bank.

Military Bridge Construction

In April 2024, the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) built tank bridges over the Wadi Gaza riverbed to enable armored units to access Hamas targets south of the stream. These bridges were used by the 401st Armored Brigade and facilitated troop movements across seasonal streams dividing northern and southern Gaza, enhancing operational mobility during military campaigns. Such bridges are typically temporary and designed for rapid deployment in conflict zones.

Civil and Strategic Infrastructure

Israel also undertakes bridge and road construction as part of broader infrastructure projects. In the West Bank, the government approved plans to separate Israeli and Palestinian traffic by building new roads and bypass routes connecting Jerusalem, Ma'ale Adumim, and surrounding areas. While not all of these involve bridges, the projects often include overpasses and crossings to improve traffic flow and security. These developments aim to reduce congestion, enhance safety, and maintain strategic connectivity.
